

A Real Swinger

Maj. Horace Worthy (third from left) is the Chief of Storage at the 21st Support Command Depot in Caerwent, South Wales. Worthy recently participated in the Pro-Am segment of the Dunlop Masters Golf Tournament at St. Pierre Golf and Country Club in England. The Dunlop is the most prestigious British tournament (after the British open) and is limited to the top 40 professionals on the European Order of Merit plus ten overseas visitors. Worthy, a one-handicapper and member of the St. Pierre club, was selected to participate in the Masters by virtue of his having won the St. Pierre Match-Play Championship earlier in the year. During the Masters competition, Worthy was paired with Ken Brown (right), a British professional, and played in a foursome which included Roger Maltbie (second from left) of the U.S. PGA tour. Worthy and Brown finished six under par on the demanding St. Pierre course which will be the site of the 1980 Curtis Cup matches. Their finish was strong enough to capture third place in the Pro-Am and Worthy contributed four birdies enroute to an individual score of one over par 72. (Maltbie's partner (left) was not identified.)
